The internet can be a great tool in our everyday lives. We can find information using search engines, communicate with loved ones through e-mail or messenger service, and even order meals from our favorite restaurants. However, the internet can be fraught with danger if one is not careful. Malicious software, or “malware,” as it is commonly known, include viruses, worms, and trojan horses, among others. They are continually being transmitted on the internet and can infiltrate your computer without you knowing! They can damage computer systems, alter files, and even extract personal information. “Antivirus” software can be installed to protect against malware in most cases. Nevertheless, internet users are still recommended not to enter dubious websites and e-mails, especially spam.

46. What is the main idea of this passage?
(A) The internet is useful in many ways
(B) Using the internet can be dangerous
(C) Malware can damage your computer
(D) Antivirus software should be installed

47. In Line 3, “fraught with” can be replaced by
(A) a part of
(B) without
(C) filled with
(D) led to

48. What is NOT an example of malware?
(A) A worm
(B) A bug
(C) A virus
(D) A Trojan horse

49. In Line 6, the word “infiltrate” means
(A) get into
(B) come out of
(C) change
(D) take away

50. How can an Internet user protect himself?
(A) Install an antivirus software
(B) Do not enter dubious websites
(C) Do not open spam
(D) All of the above
